

Qualified Interest Income (QII) and Qualified Short-Term Capital Gain Percentages for the Goldman Sachs ETFs

Certain Goldman Sachs ETFs generate qualified interest income and short-term capital gains that may be exempt from United States withholding tax when distributed to non-U.S. shareholders. The U.S. tax law permits a regulated investment company to designate the portion of distributions paid that represent interest-related dividends (commonly referred to as qualified interest income) and short-term capital gain dividends as exempt from U.S. withholding tax when paid to non-U.S. shareholders with proper documentation.

The distributions that have been identified by the Goldman Sachs ETFs as exempt from U.S. withholding tax are disclosed in the table below. This information is subject to change and will be designated by the Funds no later than 60 days after the Funds' fiscal year end. We recommend that you consult your professional tax advisor for further information.

Risk Considerations and General Disclosures:

Exchange-Traded Funds are subject to risks similar to those of stocks. Investment returns may fluctuate and are subject to market volatility, so that an investor's shares, when redeemed, or sold, may be worth more or less than their original cost. ETFs may yield investment results that, before expenses, generally correspond to the price and yield of a particular index. There is no assurance that the price and yield performance of the index can be fully matched.

ETF Fund shares are not individually redeemable and are issued and redeemed by the Fund at their net asset value ("NAV") only in large, specified blocks of shares called creation units. Shares otherwise can be bought and sold only through exchange trading at market price (not NAV). Shares may trade at a premium or discount to their NAV in the secondary market. Brokerage commissions will reduce returns.

The summary prospectus, if available, and the Prospectus contains this and other information about the Fund.

The Investment Company Act of 1940 (the "Act") imposes certain limits on investment companies purchasing or acquiring any security issued by another registered investment company. For these purposes the definition of "investment company" includes funds that are unregistered because they are excepted from the definition of investment company by section 3(c)(1) and 3(c)(7) of the Act.
